What 9th Graders Need To Do Get Recruited For A Football Scholarship: Athletic Scholarship Info (Football Recruit Book 1)

Synopsis

Most college football coaches pay very little attention to prospective athletes when they are only freshmen in high school. Unfortunately, many parents and high school coaches basically do the same thing. The ninth grade is considered, by most, to be too early to be thinking about getting your son involved in the college football recruiting process. However, here at College Athletic Scholarship, it has been our experience through helping thousands of high school athletes over the past fourteen years that a solid recruiting foundation can be started as early as the ninth grade. This, of course, depends on the maturity and determination of your ninth grade football player. For example, is he willing to tackle the steps necessary to land a college athletic scholarship. Is he willing to learn and apply the steps in the recruiting process as they are given month-by-month? Is he willing to lay the groundwork that will put him ahead of his competition next year? If the answers to these questions are yes, then this book will take him and guide him through the foundational steps in the recruiting process. If he does the steps as they are given, he will be prepared next year when there is a good possibility that he will see playing time. He will be familiar with basic recruiting terminology, and he will be physically fit to play for his team. Contrary to what many people still believe, obtaining one of these coveted college scholarships is a process, and in most cases the earlier, you start the more likely you are to play for the school of your dreams. This guide is for the student/athlete and his parents that want to get a jump-start on recruiting process. Fortunately, the process is simple. It really is just a matter of starting early and doing steps as they come along. Conservatively speaking, college football scholarships can be worth in excess of $150,000 depending upon the school and the number of years your son takes to get his degree. Unfortunately, even in the ninth grade, recruiting mistakes can be made. If your son is determined to win a college football scholarship and you approve, this guide, written by college athletic scholarship recipients, will not only get him started off on the right foot, but it will also keep him compliant with the NCAA guidelines.

Customer Reviews

As a parent that considered little league football involvement as extracurricular and even hoped that he would grow out of it, I found this to be an excellent primer now that I realize my son's interest has only grown over time. My son is completing eighth grade and we have discussed being intentional in planning his high school career. Continuing to play football is top on his list. Thank you for providing an introductory resource that will allow a reluctant football mom to get on my son's team!

I'm the uncle of a very talented young athlete, and my sister and brother-in-law have thought about going down the road to possibly pursuing a college sports scholarship by the time my nephew graduates. This book makes it clear that if you're going to do that, you need to start as early as freshman year. West breaks down the essentials: strength training, proper attitude, good grades, and and and when to start the application process. Essentially, it's everything you need to know to make yourself attractive to colleges.

Bought this for my son and his 9th grader a great football player and a 4.7 student in his prep school. He aspires to win a football scholarship and then on to pro football. This book is an excellent blueprint for him to follow.
