Customer Reviews

The author shares the importance of the strength and bond that develops between the cancer patient and his/her support system as they join forces to battle the illness. Linda has now retired from her career as an elementary teacher and counselor. She and her husband reside in Overland Park, Kansas.

Linda's journey rang so true to me, as I also have had breast cancer and am now dealing with lymphoma. Linda states at the end of her book, "the most rewarding and precious gift given to me during treatments was the love and kindness of my family and friends." She is so right, as the support I have gotten also comes from my family and friends. This book is very inspirational, especially if you have someone who is going through cancer treatments. A positive outlook on life is the winning ticket for Linda and for all who read her book.

Excellent book not only for someone who has had cancer, know someone with cancer, but just "anyone".....it made me really step back and think that when you are out there running just your normal everyday routine to really think and treat everyone with respect as you never know which of those people are going through trials and tribulations of their own. Also, a great book for mothers & daughters....truly an inspiring story.

I really wish I had this book while I was going thru Lymphoma. I didnt know what to expect. I could relate to almost everything in this book.. I recommend this book to anyone who wants to understand Lymphoma..

The author's courage and determination give encouragement to those living with cancer - written by someone who has been there herself.
