Walking Into The Unknown (# 10 In The Bregdan Chronicles Historical Fiction Romance Series)

Synopsis

Walking Into The Unknown is the 10th book in the Bregdan Chronicles historical fiction series. As of today, there are 10 books in the series. Make sure you start reading with # 1 â “ Storm Clouds Rolling In. It's readers like you who have turned the series into a world-wide best-seller. Thank you! Book Description: Where will Americans find the courage to walk into the unknown? Carrie is rebuilding her life, but an unexpected twist sends her, Janie and Matthew onto an adventure she could never have envisioned â “ but not before she has to say good-bye to someone very special. Moses and Rose are finally free to pursue their dream of college. Will it be everything they hoped for? And will they push through their fears to actually do it? Jeremy and Marietta receive exciting news, but will the outcome force them to leave their life in Richmond behind? Abby struggles to adjust to life without Carrie, Rose and Moses, but Matthew sends someone very unexpected into her life. When everyone really just wants a simple, clear future, each person finds they have no choice but to walk into the unknown. Volume # 10 of the Bregdan Chronicles continues the sweeping historical saga that now encompasses the third year of American Reconstruction. How many books will be in the Bregdan Chronicles? No one knows yet! Ginny intends to write these character's stories, one year at a time, for as long as she is able to write. She is passionate about bringing history to life through historical fiction. Since she is amazingly healthy, that could be for a very long time! She doesn't like stories to end any more than you do. This one won't end for a very long time! Review: Happy, sad & impatient (waiting for the next book)! History you've never been taught brought forward. I've learned a lot of history from all of Ginny's books (thank you so much for sharing). It's hard to believe these people are fictional. The story continues on in each book, a page turner you'll be reluctant to put down until you've finished reading the entire book. Less than 24 hrs since its' release and I've finished the book. Time to start rereading the entire set again. If you haven't read any of these books you've missed out big time. My suggestion would be just try the first book. If you're not hooked by the first chapter try one more. These books have grabbed my heart & soul from the beginning page right until the last word. Review: I JUST FINISHED ALWAYS FORWARD.. As always reading any of the Bregdan Chronicles, I did not want to put the book down. I will read it again. I have learned so much from reading all 9 of these books. I also felt part of the main people in the book and their families. At one point I cried and cried. Right now I am going to go back and read the book again. I have so much more to learn from this book, and to enjoy reading it all over again. Thank you, GINNY DYE. I love reading, but these are the best books I have ever read. And have opened up my eyes to things I never knew.

I just finished this book, #10 in The Bregdan Chronicles. Once again, I was struck by how much research Ginny Dye had to do in order to write this book. As with all of her books, the history is more interesting because instead of being in 'history book' form, the characters have conversations about what is going on around them. I have followed Carrie Cromwell Borden since book #1 and have watched her go through many, many changes. The beloved characters in this book are going through changes themselves and we watch as they separate and go about their lives...for a time. Even though the war is over, the south is a VERY dangerous place to be for blacks and others as well. I won't give away any more of the book..but if you have not read it, I urge you to do so. Once again, Ginny Dye has created a magnificent book.

Page 485...To be continued. The words I never want to come to when reading this Ginny Dye page tuner, Walking into the Unknown. Chapter one begins renewing for me the dreadful death of Robert and that another Harvest Season is over. The story flow brings to mind, slowly, all the characters who have become my friends and will be to new readers of this series. The story takes a new curve as we travel West on the Santa Fe Trail following old story friends and meeting new characters and enjoying the research Dye has done . The war is over but American greed is on going as we steal Indian land and read of the torture of the Navaho Indians. Every chapter ends with a page turning sentence that shortens my night sleep. I read slowly not wanting the story to end. Whether you are a new reader of the series or an old friend of the characters, I recommend this book to you. I understand why Dye is slow in getting each new book out, because her research is spot on. Read book number 10 Walking Into The Unknown or any of the Bregdan Chronicles and you will be hooked and addicted to the writing of Ginny Dye.

If you haven't read the first books in the Bregdan Chronicles Series, you really should! Each book can pretty much stand alone, but, since they are intended to be a series, are much more meaningful if read in order. I liked this book--#10--much better than book #9. The author, by her own admission, struggled on book 9, but appeared to be back full force with this one. If you love American history, you will love this series! And do read #9 even though it is my least favorite so that you can read the historic events in order and keep up with the characters. I thought I knew a lot about the Civil War period, but these books have taught me some things I didn't know and caused me to research more about other happenings of the era.

This is the best series I've ever read on the Civil War. Can't wait for Book 10 o be released in April 2017.

I have enjoyed the whole series, beginning with book #1. I did notice more social and political themes in this installment, not sure how some of it will impact the story line, or why it was necessary for the author to move in certain directions. I do understand the political climate of that day, but she seems to be bringing her own views in. Maybe I'm wrong, but it seemed like it to me. That said, I enjoyed the book and will continue to follow the story and characters. Hopefully it's not going to evolve into a social and political commentary, because I'm reading the story as more of an escape and for relaxation.

Ginny has done a wonderful job of researching historic events and blending her characters into them! They've inspired me to delve into the subject matters and read the documented truth which she describes so well. However I'm disappointed that Ginny has included alternate lifestyles as acceptable in this book; this was supposed to be a Christian series (she gives credit to God), but if you believe in the Bible, then this is not acceptable. We are to love all people, but not excuse their lifestyle, without telling them of God's redemption from homosexuality. I'd been recommending this series to many friends but will have to go back and let them know so they can decide for themselves if they want to continue reading. I'm sorry to have to post this, but it may help others to consider whether to continue reading the series as well.

Loved reading this book. It unites historic clarity with current trends of thought while challenging the reader to question and refine those thoughts. I teared up frequently with the characters, both happy tears and sad tears as their lives unfolded. It might be hard for someone to read "Walking Into The Unknown" without reading the first 9 books in the series but Ginny Dye did an amazing job of weaving together references to characters from the past and events that had a direct bearing on the current action. I think of the characters as real people dealing with real circumstances similar to today's world and often find myself asking "what would do?" I challenge anyone to read this series and remain static in his or her thinking. There is something for anyone to grow in thinking, in attitude, in emotions, in judgement.
