

The book was found

Why Washington Won't Work: Polarization, Political Trust, And The Governing Crisis (Chicago Studies In American Politics)

Synopsis

Polarization is at an all-time high in the United States. But contrary to popular belief, Americans are polarized not so much in their policy preferences as in their feelings toward their political opponents: To an unprecedented degree, Republicans and Democrats simply do not like one another. No surprise that these deeply held negative feelings are central to the recent (also unprecedented) plunge in congressional productivity. The past three Congresses have gotten less done than any since scholars began measuring congressional productivity. In Why Washington Won't Work, Marc J. Hetherington and Thomas J. Rudolph argue that a contemporary crisis of trust—“people whose party is out of power have almost no trust in a government run by the other side”—has deadlocked Congress. On most issues, party leaders can convince their own party to support their positions. In order to pass legislation, however, they must also create consensus by persuading some portion of the opposing party to trust in their vision for the future. Without trust, consensus fails to develop and compromise does not occur. Up until recently, such trust could still usually be found among the opposition, but not anymore. Political trust, the authors show, is far from a stable characteristic. It’s actually highly variable and contingent on a variety of factors, including whether one’s party is in control, which part of the government one is dealing with, and which policies or events are most salient at the moment. Political trust increases, for example, when the public is concerned with foreign policy—as in times of war—and it decreases in periods of weak economic performance. Hetherington and Rudolph do offer some suggestions about steps politicians and the public might take to increase political trust. Ultimately, however, they conclude that it is unlikely levels of political trust will significantly increase unless foreign concerns come to dominate and the economy is consistently strong.

Book Information

Series: Chicago Studies in American Politics

Paperback: 256 pages

Publisher: University Of Chicago Press (September 14, 2015)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 022629921X

ISBN-13: 978-0226299211

Product Dimensions: 6 x 1.1 x 9 inches

Shipping Weight: 15.2 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.5 out of 5 stars 4 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #81,749 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #40 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Politics & Government > United States > Legislative Branch #81 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Politics & Government > Elections & Political Process > Political Parties #211 in Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Politics & Government > United States > National

Customer Reviews

âœHetherington and Rudolph marshal a massive array of evidence to show that political trust guides American political life, particularly when the public is focused on international affairs. The book is a mammoth contribution, and it is likely to be influential for decades.â • (Jason Barabas, Stony Brook University)âœWhy Washington Wonâ™t Work makes a substantial contribution to our understanding of the roots of dysfunction in American government. Hetherington and Rudolph present a highly convincing case that the partisan polarization of the mass public has contributed to the problem by polarizing trust in government. Their creative and persuasive analysis reveals many new insights into the vital role of trust in government for explaining why the public supports or opposes government action and how we might seek solutions.â • (Stephen Nicholson, University of California, Merced)âœHetherington and Rudolphâ™s Why Washington Wonâ™t Work zeroes in on the affective component of polarized politics: Republicans and Democrats not only disagree on issues, they also just donâ™t like one another. Mutual antipathy undermines trust, which inhibits the deal-making essential to governing under our Madisonian system. This cogent and well-supported argument helps to explain why gridlock and stalemate have become the new normal.â • (Gary Jacobson, University of California, San Diego)âœWhy Washington Wonâ™t Work is a marvelous book. Hetherington and Rudolph have written a compelling and smoothly accessible work that reveals more about the troubled condition of American politics than any presidential campaign tomeâ "and they have accomplished this while maintaining the most rigorous methodological standards of political science.â • (David Maraniss, author of First in His Class: A Biography of Bill Clinton and Barack Obama: The Story)"Hetherington and Rudolph argue that a profound, and historically high, lack of trust among the public reduces the likelihood of compromise in Congress. In an increasingly polarized political environment that is already predisposed to gridlock, this finding on public trust helps to further explain the inability of Washington to govern, effectively legislate, and work." (New Books in Political Science 2015-11-16)âœHetherington and Rudolphâ™s careful statistical analysis of public opinion expands the understanding of the role of political trust in the governing process by treating it as a cause rather than a consequence of public policy. . . . Highly recommended.â • (Choice 2016-04-25)

Marc J. Hetherington is professor of political science at Vanderbilt University. He is the author of Why Trust Matters and coauthor, with Jonathan D. Weiler, of Authoritarianism and Polarization in American Politics. Thomas J. Rudolph is professor of political science at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and coauthor of Expression vs. Equality.

Needed the book for class, works like its supposed to.

Full of good analysis but would be difficult reading for the average voter. The theme is easy to understand, but the prominent use of sophisticated statistics would not appeal to most readers

This is a great book that would appeal to political junkies and students of politics alike. In fact, anyone who wants to know why things have gone so wrong should think about reading this book. It has very clear exposition, is engagingly written, and is backed up by solid evidence.

Great insight on the polarization of political trust in the US.

Download to continue reading...

Why Washington Won't Work: Polarization, Political Trust, and the Governing Crisis (Chicago Studies in American Politics) Trust: Mastering the Four Essential Trusts: Trust in Self, Trust in God, Trust in Others, Trust in Life Political Polarization in American Politics Governing Sound: The Cultural Politics of Trinidad's Carnival Musics (Chicago Studies in Ethnomusicology) Seats: Chicago 120 Seating Plans to Chicago and Milwaukee Area Theatres, Concert Halls and Sports Stadiums (Seats Chicago: 125 Seating Plans to Chicago and Milwaukee) Filibustering: A Political History of Obstruction in the House and Senate (Chicago Studies in American Politics) Party Wars: Polarization and the Politics of National Policy Making (The Julian J. Rothbaum Distinguished Lecture Series) The Politics of Resentment: Rural Consciousness in Wisconsin and the Rise of Scott Walker (Chicago Studies in American Politics) Same Sex, Different Politics: Success and Failure in the Struggles over Gay Rights (Chicago Studies in American Politics) Strategic Party Government: Why Winning Trumps Ideology (Chicago Studies in American Politics) American Indian Politics and the American Political System (Spectrum Series: Race and Ethnicity in National and Global Politics) The Political Psychology of Women in U.S. Politics (Routledge Studies in Political Psychology) The Submerged State: How Invisible Government Policies Undermine American Democracy (Chicago Studies in American Politics) In Time of War: Understanding

American Public Opinion from World War II to Iraq (Chicago Studies in American Politics) Building an American Empire: The Era of Territorial and Political Expansion (Princeton Studies in American Politics: Historical, International, and Comparative Perspectives) How Policies Make Citizens: Senior Political Activism and the American Welfare State (Princeton Studies in American Politics: Historical, International, and Comparative Perspectives) The Political Life of Medicare (American Politics and Political Economy) Distorting the Law: Politics, Media, and the Litigation Crisis (Chicago Series in Law and Society) Governing the Commons: The Evolution of Institutions for Collective Action (Political Economy of Institutions and Decisions) The Art of Fear: Why Conquering Fear Won't Work and What to Do Instead

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help