Ellie Uyttenbroek And Ari Versluis: Exactitudes

Synopsis

On the twentieth anniversary of its publication, this volume reprints and expands upon what has become a beloved photobook classic. Inspired by the striking dress codes of various social groups, Rotterdam-based photographer Ari Versluis and profiler Ellie Uyttenbroek have been systematically documenting the group identities they have encountered on the streets of cities around the world since 1994. They call their series Exactitudes, as a contraction of "exact" and "attitude." By presenting their subjects in an identical framework—each member of a group is posed similarly against a white ground—Versluis and Uyttenbroek create an almost scientific record of people's attempts to distinguish themselves from others by assuming a group identity, manifested in a strict dress code. Simultaneously rigorously documentary and artistic, the project tests the apparent contradiction between individuality and uniformity, subverts the idea of "street style" and disrupts conventions of documentary street photography (the series has been called "August Sander and Eugène Atget turned on their heads by Bernd and Hilla Becher" by photographer and critic Gil Blank). For this twentieth-anniversary edition, Versluis and Uyttenbroek have produced 19 new series. The subcultures of Rotterdam's heterogeneous street scene remain a major source of inspiration for them, although they have also visited St. Petersburg, Zurich, Milan, Beijing, Rio de Janeiro, Casablanca, Praia (Cabo Verde), New York, Bordeaux, London and Paris.

really cool book. each page (and there are over 150) features a set of 12 people all dressed very similar to one another. there are variations of dress and how people attempt to be unique in their clothing choices. but, by pairing the people into groups you can see that PEOPLE ARE NOT UNIQUE! the book very clearly shows that people are conformists more than anything else, and that even the most 'unique' clothing choices make you look just like another group of folks who gravitate to that look as well. it's fun to see this. and if you do want to stand out the only way is with extremely bold patterns and prints; those were the only photos in the book where the individuals looked fairly unique and didn't conform as much. monochrome = you will always look like everyone around you whether you realize it or not.
