A lifelong traveler since his family moved to the Middle East in 1979, Steve McDonald has lived in Saudi Arabia, Italy, India, and Indonesia, visited dozens of other countries, and spent the better part of two decades traveling his native Canada from coast to coast via car, bus, helicopter, canoe, ship, and on foot. Everywhere he goes he soaks up the local colour, the beauty of his surroundings, and, most of all, the lines-of the landscape, the architecture, the objects and machines he finds along the way. A graduate of the Ontario College of Art and Design, Steve's work has been showcased in many gallery exhibitions, television documentaries, and various publications, and can be found in many private homes and corporate collections worldwide. You can also find it online at www.artbysteve.squarespace.com.

I just received this book and it is going to be very challenging. This book is definitely not for the faint of heart. It is very detailed.

The latest from Steve MacDonald features his careful line drawings - this time with machines: new, old, and imaginary. You can be very fluid and work his images into color field fantasies, or be very precise and fill in all the textures and details as fine as you like. The drawings really are open to a wide range of techniques and visions. There are 58 different designs for you to exercise your powers of creativity/observation, and thumbnail color guides for 40 of them. As a bonus the machines include Steve's inventive designs for a flying ice cream truck zooming over a cityscape and cyberpunk/steampunk drawings. The pages are double-sided and non-perforated, so you'll need to watch for bleed-through or embossing the drawing on the back side of what you are working on.
